

Shana Brown
Creative Coding 1
Thoughts on the last lecture
9/3/26

Thoughts on The Last Lecture

This lecture made me feel that life can continue giving you things when you least expect it, but you need to keep pushing forward and not give up. Along the way, you are going to receive criticism and make mistakes, but you can learn from that criticism and use it to become better.

I also liked the message that you can help others achieve their goals along the way. The lecture reminded me that life is not just about reaching your own goals, but also about helping others and learning from the challenges you face. I think this is important because sometimes we focus so much on our own problems that we forget how much we can help someone else. Even small acts of encouragement or support can make a difference in another person's life. The lecture also reminded me that challenges do not have to stop us from moving forward. We can learn from difficult experiences and use them to become stronger in our work.